KEYNOTE SPEAKER

Professor Royce Sadler,
School of Education,
University of Queensland

“Making assessment work more effectively for improving student learning”

David Royce Sadler is Senior Assessment Scholar in the School of Education at the University of Queensland, and also Professor Emeritus in Higher Education at Griffith University.

Since 1973, his teaching and research has been focused on the formative and summative assessment of student learning, and specifically since 2000 on assessment in higher education.

Current interests are in criteria, grading, assuring academic achievement standards while continuing his work on assessment for improved learning.
